

COURTS.

New-York Common Pleas.—Before Justice Daley, Sept. 6.—Richard Decker vs. Claude Roachman.—The ruling of the judge tested upon a point which arose on the trial of this cause, having been the subject of very general discussion and remark, it is deemed proper to present a brief notice of the case.

The facts were as follows: On the 15th of March last, the widow Caroline Baker was lying at Coopers-alp with a cargo of oysters, the plaintiff in this suit master, was engaged in the care of the defendant was levied on an undivided part of the cargo as the property of a third person. The master engaged to repossess. The Sheriff's officer, holding the execution, was called upon, in order to know the extent of his levy, and the amount which had accrued according to the terms of the instrument, and reduced it to a smaller proportion. On the trial of the cause I was inadvertently called by my associate counsel, who was taken to my competency, on the ground that counsel in the case are not competent witnesses, and sentenced by the court, on the authority of some recent decisions, to pay damages in the English law, U. C. R. 32, id. 24.

In the last case, the judge cited the trial of Sir Thomas More, an eminent English statesman, and the testimony of the Solicitor General, as being confidential communications made by the accused. The exclusion of the testimony in this cause was of no material importance, as the facts were so plain, that even a master may have been taken to my competency, on the ground that counsel in the case are not competent witnesses, and sentenced by the court, on the authority of some recent decisions, to pay damages in the English law, U. C. R. 32, id. 24.
